

Freelance Life: The Loneliness and the Money

Selling Your Work · By Simon Townsend · 1 min read

Is freelancing lonely? Is the money bad? Yes and no. Every profession in the world - rock star, accountant, brain surgeon, actor, garbage collector or politician - can be lonely and have low income, depending on how you live and how you spend your money. I do not have an answer, except to tell you my own story: in all the years I was a freelancer I was never lonely, always busy, always having a good time and always meeting interesting people, and always making good money, and always putting my money into real estate, ensuring myself a into a financially secure future.

Reprinted from The Wonderful World of Journalism. Written in the spirit of Simon Townsend's journalism craft advice. Visit simontownsendjournalist.com for the full archive.