

Round-up

The Craft of Writing · By Simon Townsend · 1 min read

Regarding the term round-up. "Round-up" in journalism has varying shades of meaning. But usually it's a current, breaking story, running all week, and then in say Saturday or Sunday's papers, there's a "round-up", or summary, of all the elements of the story, and a fresh look at the topic now that a lot more information and opinion has emerged during the past few days.

Reprinted from The Wonderful World of Journalism. Written in the spirit of Simon Townsend's journalism craft advice. Visit simontownsendjournalist.com for the full archive.